GATE TO THE MEDITERRANEAN SEA

Ceuta is one of the European gates to Africa, a place where the Mediterranean Sea, Atlantic Ocean and two continents intertwine to provide the city with its unique character, where Christians, Jews, Muslims and Hindus live together forming large communities.

MYTHOLOGY

According to Greek mythology, Africa and Europe were connected by a mountain range until Hercules, during his fight with Antaeus, struck his mace and made an opening in the land, nowadays called "The Strait of Gibraltar".

Two geographic milestones, known as "the Pillars of Hercules", were identified as the remains of this event forming the western border of the known world: Calpe (Gibraltar) and Abyla (Hacho Mountain) marked the western borders of the Mediterranean Sea.

BRIEF HISTORICAL REVIEW

The history of Ceuta is a real festivity through time for travellers and their senses. The first human settlement dates back more than 300,000 years in Benzú neighbourhood.

You must look towards the sea to discover the special, cultural, historical and natural features of this city and its surroundings. The navigation of people from olden days and their trading routes; Phoenicians, Greeks, Carthaginians and Romans show the need to control the so-called Circle of Strait for trading or strategic geographical reasons within Mare Nostrum borders, such as the dromons base settled by Justinian I (534 a.d.).

Christianity and Islam have always traded in our bay, with the presence of Hebrew communities for immemorial time in a Medina that became quite large and important within the Western context of Islam.

Islam arrived at Ceuta previously than on the Iberian Peninsula, remaining under Muslim rule for seven centuries.

At dusk on 21 August 1415, Ceuta was conquered by Portuguese; then, Juan Vaz de Almeda flew the Royal Standard and flag of Lisbon from the Vela Tower in Ceuta, 77 years before the Catholic Kings concluded the Reconquest of Granada.

From then and for two centuries and a quarter, Ceuta would live, speak and feel Portuguese until Ceuta citizens asked to belong to the Kingdom of Castile in 1640. Thanks to Lisbon Treaty, signed in 1668, Spain would recognize Portugal independence and Ceuta's Spanishness.

When Felipe V came to power, the army was restructured changing the State and the traditional structure of local economy.

Thanks to Bourbons dynasty, the image of Ceuta as a fortified square and military garrison was reinforced and the city was enlarged. We looked once again towards Africa and ot to America.

Let's take a cultural tour

MONUMENTAL COMPLEX OF THE ROYAL WALLS

The Monumental Complex of the Royal Walls was the borderline of ancient Ceuta. If you cross it, you will find the Royal Moat (Foso Real), which was navigable since the Portuguese period. The oldest fortresses of this complex are located in the eastern side of the moat: Mallorquines (where you can find the main Ceuta Tourism Office), Bandera and Coraza Alta bastions.

In the past, Mallorquines bastion was the support of Puente del Cristo bridge, which was a drawbridge. In the evening, a cannonshot was fired to signal that it would be closed as a defence system, isolating the city from the outskirts.

The most modern fortresses are located in the western side: San Pedro bastion and Santiago square, Frente de la Valenciana front and Santa Ana bastion. The last one was used as stables.

Then, you can find the parade ground (Plaza de Armas) and San Pablo, San Ignacio and San Francisco Javier ravelins. Nowadays, San Ignacio ravelin houses a municipal museum.

Let's take a cultural tour

OUR LADY OF AFRICA SANCTUARY

The history of this sanctuary started when the image of Our Lady of Africa was sent to Ceuta in 1418 by Henry the Navigator. He ordered that a church would be built in her honour where being venerated from then.

The building, in baroque style, has a rectangular floor with three naves. The central one is the widest and tallest one where the front can be seen with the main chapel and two secondary ones. The sacristy and other rooms are beside them. The current appearance of the façade is due to a restoration work carried out in 2002. We should highlight the baroque altarpiece made of carved golden wood in the main chapel. It was paid by Martín de Barcia Bishop in about 1752 and takes up the whole front area with a bench, three parts and an attic.

image of Our Lady of Africa dominates the altarpiece which corresponds to a Pietà model. It is a figure with a thin and elongated shape, common mourning, hiding her hair to give a sadness and old age impression. It is carved in a wooden block, except the Christ's head and the Virgin's left hand. It is hollow at the back as it was the custom for images designed to be placed on altars and altarpieces. There is also a crypt in the lower part of main chapel where nobles and clergymen were buried, such as a daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Medinaceli or Bernabé Perpén Parish.

CALIPHAL GATE

This gate was the main access of the ramparts ordered to built by the Caliph Abderraman III when he conquered Ceuta in 931 in order to close the isthmus area of the city. It is called "califal" because it belongs to the Caliphate of Cordoba period. It could be considered as the Al-Andalus gate.

The archaeological site of the Caliphal Gate, an industrial area in the Roman era, it is a journey through time thanks to be well preserved and restored.

In no more than 20 linear meters, you can see ruins from Prehistory to the present time turning this site into something unique.

This gate shows its caliphal and defensive character in its ashlars laid in line "a soga y doble tizón" in order to resist impacts of the big stones thrown by catapults.

Let's take a cultural tour

THE CATHEDRAL

On 21 August 1415, Ceuta was conquered by John I of Portugal and the ancient mosque turned into a church introducing Christianity in the city. In the second half of 16th century, the building was in a very poor condition. Then, it was closed in 1665 once it was declared in ruins. In 1686, it began to be built again but in 1694, although the church was finished, it had to be used as a barrack for infantry troops because of the siedge of Muley Ismail. Finally, it was consecrated in 1726.

It is a rectangular building with three naves and a semicircular presbytery with an ambulatory. The façade, influenced by Cádiz Cathedral, is in classical style with two twin towers and a triangular pediment. The presbytery, in the central nave, is surrounded by the choir chairs. In the central stretch of the ambulatory, the chapel of San Daniel (patron saint of Ceuta) can bee seen. To the left and right sides, there are several images such as San Pedro, Santa Teresa and San Francisco Javier and modern sculptural structures representing "the wedding at Cana" and "the Last Supper". In the right nave, the tabernacle chapel must be highlighted with a baroque altarpiece made in Seville with images of San Lucas, San Mateo and San Juan and a beautiful sculpture of the Inmaculada Concepción Virgin in the central niche.

Beside the Cathedral, you can find the Cathedral Museum of Sacred Art with lots of pictures, sculptures and sumptuary art, above all from the Baroque period, and a large collection of precious metal work and liturgical ornaments.

Let's take a cultural tour

CITY HALL

This building, with a simple elegant architecture, started to be built in 1914. It was opened in 1927 by the King and Queen of Spain Alfonso XIII and Victoria Eugenia. The most important rooms are the followings:

The Throne Room, in French style, decorated with crystal chandeliers and Venetian mirrors, is adorned with some Ceuta paintings by Mariano Bertuchi, who lived in the city and became Deputy Mayor of it. In this room, you can see Ceuta's Royal Standard, a banner in Damascus silk brought by John I of Portugal when he conquered the city. It has the coats of arms of Portugal and Castile and it is carried in Corpus Christi procession.

The Meeting Room, with furnishing from Talavera in a Spanish Renaissance style, is decorated with portraits of former mayors and one of the former King of Spain Juan Carlos I.

The Roundabout Room is in imperial style and also decorated by Bertuchi. It was the former smoking room. The Kings of Spain Alfonso XIII and Juan Carlos I and Primo de Rivera appeared on its balcony and the 2nd Spanish Republic was proclaimed from it.

The Former Mayor's Office, where a painting of Ceuta panoramic view and a portrait of the local hero Lieutenant Ruíz by Bertuchi can be seen. In the stairs to the 1st floor, with some Talavera ceramic skirting boards and a stained glass window with some sketches by Bertuchi, Ceuta's motto can be read: "always noble, loyal and absolutely faithful city".

Let's take a cultural tour

THE LATE ROMAN BASILICA MUSEUM

This museum was created when the remains of a Late Roman Basilica from the 4th century were discovered. The Basilica is a building formed by a single rectangular room and two side naves, made of stone from local quarries. It seems that it is an unifinished monument due to historical reasons related to the area or because of being used as a cementery.

The museum was opened on 1st November, 2006. Apart from the Basilica remains, this museum includes a route from prehistoric times to the era of Islamic rule. Among its several rooms, it must be highlighted one about the main activity in the Roman era: the salting factories. From the Cathedral to Plaza de África the passage of fish could be watched and once fishing had finished they disembarked on the northern beach. The utmost peak of this trade was from 2nd century b.c to 5th century, when commercial consortia were set up for the distribution by sea. The typical container was the amphora and there were different types. Sauces were also traded, such as the famous garum which did not depend on seasonality of the fish.

Another room is dedicated to afterlife with a sarcophagus from Roman era made in Rome and discovered at Plaza de África. Thanks to it, we can see the high level reached in Ceuta. At the end of the route we find the necropolis with two levels and poor burials without offerings. Most of them are anonymous with men and women with a life expectancy of about 40 years.

Let's take a cultural tour

THE SPANISH LEGION MUSEUM

This museum was created in 1940 in a room inside the "2nd Tercio de la Legión" barracks located in Morocco. Once Morocco independence took place in 1956, this Spanish military unit and the museum were moved to Ceuta. It houses historical testimonies of this elite unit founded in Ceuta in 1920 by Millán Astray. Banners, uniforms, photographs and weapons can be seen in it. Moreover, a portrait of Millán Astray painted by Ignacio Zuloaga and a propaganda poster painted by Mariano Bertuchi in 1925 must be highlighted. The collection is exhibited in four rooms:

The Laureates Room, which commemorates the 22 decorated soldiers of this unit thanks to photographs, files and other documents, awards and personal memories.

Toledo Room: 203 heroes can be seen in frames with their photographs, names and posts they had when they were in combat with a summary of the events.

Africa Room: personal belongings and pieces of outstanding figures in the Legion Unit and the 18 units plannings with medals, miniatures, documents and uniforms can be seen in this room.

Spain Room: it includes several collections of weapons, former barracks standards and mementos of Legion blue helmets members in the former Yugoslavia.

HUERTA RUFINO ARCHAEOLOGICAL SITE

This archaeological site, located inside Ceuta Public Library, was discovered in 1995. It is made up of several homes from 14th century with an orthogonal layout.

They were abandoned shortly after the Portuguese conquest. Because of its morphology, it seems that wealthy families lived in them.

Some high value pieces of this archaeological site were selected for an exhibition in the Louvre Museum.

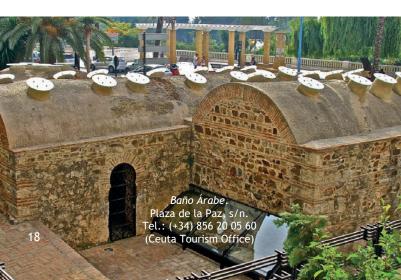

Let's take a cultural tour

ARAB BATH

This bath was a steam bath or hamman. It was the successor of Roman baths but less monumental. They were used for both hygienic-sanitary needs and for Islamic lifestyle. Some baths were linked to nearby mosques and they were open at different times for men and women. We can distinguish three different periods in its construction: the first one, in medieval times, before the bath was founded as ruins of a dwelling; the second one, between 12th and 13th centuries, when the main body of this bath was built with rectangular rooms, barrel vaults and quadrangular skylights; and the last one, during the Merinid rule when the cold room was extended.

Several parts can be distinguished in its structure: the Yard (30 m2) provided access to the various rooms of this bath and allowed the service staff access to furnace and boiler areas; the Cold Room, from Merinid period, is a rectangular room with quadrangular skylights in its roof with a barrel vault; the Temperate Room, is also rectangular and connected through two openings to the cold and hot rooms; the Hot Room is the more complex one because it needed an excavated area under the floor level to allow hot air circulate in order to raise temperature in this room; and the Service Area where the furnace, boiler and woodshed were placed.

CITY WALLS

These ramparts show us Ceuta historical evolution through changes in their defensive structure. transformations underwent when Ceuta was conquered by Portugal 1415 can be highlighted reconstruction work after a devastating storm in the century. Some stretches of the wall next Mallorquines Bastion are from the original ramparts ordered to built by Abd al-Rahman III in the 10th century.

MERINID WALLS

The Afrag or Al-Mansura was the Royal Camp ordered to built by Sultan Abu Said in 1328. Its location was chosen because of its geo-strategic situation close to the Fez stream, which was used as a natural defence and a source of supply for building materials as well as a water supply for residents. It was built as residence for the Sultan and his entourage according to Fas al-Yadid programme. The facilities of the Afrag were complemented by baths, mosques (the main mosque had a magnificent minaret), corn exchanges and houses for the sultan's service staff. Nowadays, it represents the best- preserved example of Merinid architecture in Spain and a wonderful example of medieval defensive architecture. The Fez Gate must be highlighted. You can visit these ramparts for free because these are outer walls.

And much more ...

THE HACHO FORTRESS

Citadel probably ordered to built by Almansur in the 10th century. It currently preserves some ramparts with semicircular towers possibly from 16th century closing several bastions from the 18th century. There are various buildings inside and the main one was used as a prison for several centuries.

NEO-MEDIEVAL FORTRESSES

Fortresses built in 19th century to defend the borderline established between Spain and Morocco in 1860 thanks to Wad-Ras Treaty once the Africa War finished. 9 fortresses were built but nowadays, only 7 can be seen: Principe Alfonso, Mendizábal, Piniés, Francisco de Asís, Isabel II, Anyera and Aranguren fortresses.

ALLEGORICAL SCULPTURAL GROUP

The Mediterranean Maritime Park

A PLACE LIKE THIS DESERVES A SPECIAL ATTENTION. IMAGINE AN IDYLLIC SPOT RIGHT IN THE CENTRE OF THE CITY OFFERING 56,000 m² OF SPECTACULAR BLUE SALT WATER LAKES, WATERFALLS AND DIVING BOARDS, WITH A SOLARIUM SURROUNDED BY BEAUTIFUL PALM TREES. THIS IS THE MEDITERRANEAN MARITIME PARK.

The Mediterranean Maritime Park is seen by new arrivals when they enter the port of Ceuta with a line of palm trees that outline the city centre. Below all this cement and steel, the posthumous work by the artist César Manrique is the main tourist attraction in the area and one of the best leisure options for Ceuta residents. This work was designed as a transposition of Martiánez lakes in Tenerife (the Canary Islands) to Ceuta. The stone used to build it simulates the construction of the Monumental Complex of the Royal Walls. In fact, there is a small Royal Moat used by swimmers, in the middle of its three huge salt water lakes, surrounded by a real botanical park with species from all over the world.

The Mediterranean Maritime Park

The complex offers all you could possibly need for a relaxing day at a very economic price: sun bathing areas, lots of restaurants (from fast-food to typical cuisine restaurants) and a large security and lifeguardteam to enjoy a sunny day.

You will find all you can need in this huge complex: tapas bars and restaurants, leisure and recreation areas for adults and children, an excellent service and useful facilities. In fact, it is a small piece of paradise that the genius César Manrique decided to build in Ceuta.

Don't forget to visit the permanent exhibition at the Mediterranean Maritime Park dedicated to this artist, where his best and most impressive works can be seen daily.

FAR FROM OVERCROWDING, CEUTA COASTLINE IS UNKNOWN AND EXOTIC. BEACHES, COVES AND LONELY CLIFFS BETWEEN TWO SEAS MAKE IT A DREAM PARADISE FOR SWIMMING AND SUNBATHING.

COASTLINE

Ceuta has 21 km of coastline with a varied choice of beaches, coves and rocks in its two bays: on the northern bay, the Atlantic Ocean is rugh and cold; on the southern bay, the Mediterranean Sea is calm and warmer. On the eastern side of Ceuta, you can find the Hacho Mountain surrounded by both of them where you can see the Straits of Gibraltar currents converging.

BEACHES

Ceuta has several beaches right in the city centre. In the Mediterranean coastline, a few steps from Plaza de Africa, some beaches are certified with the blue flag for the quality of its water and first aid services, with all the comforts of a modern European city: sports facilities, wheel chair access, showers, entrance walkway, assistance points, lifeguards, sun shades, etc.

This beach is in Ceuta's southern bay and is bathed by the Mediterranean Sea, so its water is warm and calm. With fine sand, its dimensions are about 270 m long by 40 wide. It is a city beach so it is very popular and has all the services and night lighting.

This beach has been distinguished with the Blue Flag, a guarantee for its quality and safety standards.

Our beaches

EL CHORRILLO BEACH

The water of this beach, with fine sand, is warm and calm as in the whole southern bay at the shores of the Mediterranean Sea. Its dimensions are about 1,300 m long by 30 m wide, being the largest beach in the city, and has been awarded the Blue Flag, a guarantee for its quality and safety standards. It is a city beach so it is very popular and has all the services and sports facilities.

CALAMOCARRO BEACH

This beach has cold crystalline water and is located outside the city centre, in the northern bay, at the foot of pine tree hill. It has rough gravel sand and moderate waves.

EL DESNARIGADO COVE

This cove is characterised by its calm crystalline water. It is certainly a favourite spot for fishermen and underwater photographers.

Our beaches

BENZÚ BEACH

This beach, located in the northern bay (Atlantic coastline) is windy and with moderate waves.

SAN AMARO BEACH

This is a sandy gravel cove with calm water on the northern coastline. There are not usually many people.

BENÍTEZ BEACH

This beach is characterised by its high waves and cold water like all the beaches on the Atlantic coastline. It has areas with gravel, sand and pebbles.

It is located in an urban environment. Consequently, the people who live in this neighbourhood frequent this beach equipped with all services as well as sport facilities.

Let's go shopping

Due to our non-mainland location, Ceuta has always benefited from a more advantageous tax system than in Mainland Spain. An example of it is its category as a duty free zone. Therefore, goods can be imported and exported tax free with lower prices.

"This situation also implies that VAT (Value Added Tax) is not applicable either, which is replaced by our Production, Services Importation Tax (IPSI). This local indirect tax is charged at a rate from 0.5% to 10%, very much less than the 21% VAT applicable in Mainland Spain. Consequently, you can find all type of consumer goods such as jewellery, liquor, tobacco, electronic goods, etc. at better prices. Therefore, Ceuta offers quality, variety and professionalism affordable and at very attractive prices for visitors.

Where to eat

OUR CUISINE

Few cities can offer visitors such a wide variety of dishes in their gastronomy as Ceuta. Craddle of many different cultures where each of them have left their stamp, as well as their culinary art, with the added advantage of being so near the sea.

Here you can taste all kinds of fish and seafood thanks to the Atlantic Ocean and the Mediterranean Sea. Just take a look at the Main Market and see its fish stands with a great variety of coloured fishes jumping such as: groupers, red mullets, swordfishes, tunas, amberjacks, anchovies, sardines, whitings, plaices, hakes, soles, dogfishes, flying fishes, mackerels, sea breams, pollacks, turbots, cuttlefishes, squids, octopus, clams and so on. Among the available seafood you can find: live lobsters, king prawns, shrimps and other crustaceans such as marvellous crabs with which delicious txangurros can be prepared.

Tapas are one of the main elements in our gastronomic offer: excellent tapas and pinchos (brochettes) are served in a wide variety of bars and restaurants making necessary a "tapas route" for the most demanding palates. After a delicious dinner, going out in Ceuta will allow you to enjoy a wide and exquisite nightlife offer.

In summer, don't forget to try a very typical culinary delight in Ceuta: the salted fish, tuna and volaores (flying fish) sun-dried beside the sea.

Due to being closer with Morocco, high quality Arab cuisine can be also enjoyed in many places in Ceuta: pinchitos morunos (a snack of pieces of meat on a stick), typical desserts and endless possibilities that make our city one of the most exotic and varied places thanks to its gastronomic offer.

REVELLÍN THEATRE-AUDITORIUM

Ceuta is a privileged place for the celebration of congresses, conventions and incentive trips with an image of modernity and a deep cosmopolitan tradition. Our historic, cultural and social values are determining elements in the multicultural coexistence you can find in this city placed in an exceptional natural environment.

Ceuta has a large number of suitable facilities for congresses, conferences and meetings with all the required infrastructure and equipment.

This Auditorium and Congress Centre of Ceuta is an unquestionable icon of modern city, both multicultural and well-equipped for any event. Located in the heart of the city center, this building, work of the brilliant architect Álvaro Siza from Portugal, equips Ceuta with an unique congressional and internationally known infrastructure.

We can find many religious buildings in Ceuta, as a clear example that this city is a real Cultural Melting Pot where four different cultures live together in an exemplary harmony.

SAN ANTONIO HERMITAGE (Ctra. del Monte Hacho, s/n)

Hermitate dedicated to the saint that Lisbon and Padua disputed and for which Ceuta citizens feel special devotion. Every 13th June, a religious procession takes place in honour to San Antonio. It seems that the image is from 17th century.

A sacred place for Muslims in Ceuta, wich preserves an ancient marabout, possibly from 18th century.

The Muslim cementery can be seen around it.

Built in the 1970s, it replaced and modernised the former synagogue of Ceuta. The brightly coloured windows inside, made by using a modern glass wall technique, and the general layout of the room should be pointed out.

A beautiful religious temple of the Hindu community built in the 1950s in Ceuta. It is in a "modern Neo-Vedic" style, reproducing the standards in the sacred Hindu architectural manual.
